"Our objective was to eliminate gluten in our meat products without altering the excellent flavour profiles our customers have come to love," company president Mike Whitaker said in a news release. The company employs more than 110 people at its Dieppe plant and produces over 300 food products for food service, grocer-retail and institutional markets across Canada.

Whitaker said the conversion to gluten-free represents a significant investment in the future of the company and the community and is hopeful that consumers on Metro Moncton will continue to support locally produced meat products.
